From the N. O. Times. Surprise and Surrender of Captain Thornton's immediately despatched a squadron of dragoons to the United States. Capt Thornton's command being surprised, in of the country. which Lieut George Mason with nine men were of war in Mexico.

The circumstances which led to the surprise are these: After Captain T's command had proceeded up the io Grande about twenty-four miles, and as was supposed, to within three miles of the Mexican camp, the guide refused to go any further. and stated for his reason that the whole country was infested with Mexicans. Capt. T., however, proceeded on with his command about two miles, when he came to a farm house, which was enclosed entirely by a chapparral fence, with the excep tion of that portion of it which bordered on th river, and this was so boggy as to be impassable Capt. T. entered this enclosure through a pair of bars, and approached the house for the purpose of making some enquiry, his command following him. So soon as his command had all entered the enclosure, the enemy, having been concealed in the chapparal, about two thousand five hundred in number, completely surrounded him, and commenced firing upon his command. He then wheeled his command, thinking that he could charge through the enemy, and pass out where he had entered, not however without a considerable loss. This he attempted, but did not succeed, the enemy being too

At this instant, Capt. Hardee approached him for the purpose of advising him how to extricate themselves. The firing of the enemy still continuing, tapt Thornton's horse, having doubtless received a shot, ran away with him, and leaped the chapurral fence, and plunged into a precipice, who attempted with the residue to make his escape by the river, intending on arriving at its margin to swim it. In this he failed, finding it so bogmusketry, dismounted and examined the arms of Filden, and Vance-14. his men, determining to seil their lives as dearly as possible. Before he had succeeded, however, in the inspection of his arms, a Mexican officer rode up and asked him to surrender Captain H. Messrs. Thomas Clayton, and Davis. replied that he would surrender on one condition, which was, that if the Mexican General would receive them as prisoners of war, and treat them as but on no other conditions. The Mexican officer subsequently captured from the enemy.
